

Guest Contributor Submissions

We are happy to publish articles from both seasoned and budding talents, and we'd be delighted to hear from you with your article proposal. The only requirement is that your article be about adventure travel.

Contributor Benefits

We are happy to showcase writers and connect them with other travellers and readers, and if you want to expand your readership (or add to your portfolio), then we'd love to hear from you. Unfortunately, all unsolicited submissions are unpaid, however, you do get some benefits which include:

- an article published in our magazine and/or website blog
- access to our audience
- an author byline (a 1-liner in the magazine) or a more descriptive one on the web
- a link to your blog (if there's an online version)
- a mention of you as a Contributor
- a post on Facebook on your article contribution

Article Submission Guideline

Your article should generally grab the readers' attention, and related to adventure travel. We accept contributions of personal travel stories or travel advice and tips.

Do submit the following:

- Your informative content is what we want, however, we do only accept submissions worded from a third-person perspective (avoid using 'I', 'my', 'our', etc) and not a diary-style personal blog if you're intending to contribute for the printed magazine. For samples, please do take a moment to browse through our online magazine. Blog-like language for our blog is acceptable.
- Your article has to be original, and has not been published elsewhere (with the exception of your personal blog).
- Word count is normally 1,000 words for the magazine, and if you're only intending to publish online on our blog, then 300-500 words will suffice.
- Accompanying photos (and captions) must be submitted for all articles. If it's for the magazine, they must be in high resolution (300dpi, A5 size), although smaller versions can be used for the web.
- Submissions may be used for our website or magazine depending on our editorial calendar (we have specific themes throughout the year).
- You may be able to submit videos of your trip but they will only be for online submissions.

Submission

Please submit your story pitch only under the 'Submissions' segment (under Contact Us). From there, we will contact you and let you know if your submission is suitable.

Restrictions

No sales pitches, please. For product/service advertisements, we do have great rates for advertisement and advertorials.

We do not want to highlight a specific product or service – it's all about the destination and experience. You are allowed to link a product/service if it isn't the main subject and if it provides value to the article.

Make sure your article and images are all your property – no reworded articles or cropped photos from other sources, please.

Please make sure your submission is grammatically and factually correct.

Finally...

Unfortunately, we can't publish all submissions – please do not be offended as there may be several factors involved. The story may not be a good fit for the moment (we may consider it for future issues); the highest success rate will be articles that follow the rules above.

We may edit submissions to fit our word count or editorial space or to ensure it fits with the magazine's overall tone.

The guidelines are subject to change at any time; we reserve the right to select the submissions that we deem suitable.
